

Heavy Metal Toxicity

A Natural Detox Program is Available!

Heavy metal toxicity, or heavy metal poisoning, is every where in the world today. This metal toxicity is poisoning your body's detoxification pathways. The poisoning through heavy metal is a pollution problem we all face.

Because of heavy metal pollution, it is exceedingly difficult for you to obtain the levels of nutrients and energy necessary for your maintaining a healthy lifestyle.

Pesticides, soil depletion, radiation, mercury from dental amalgam fillings, cadmium from cigarettes and second hand smoke, chemicals from the air, and lead from old mines, gasoline, tap water and lead-based paints, are just a few of the toxins you are exposed to on a daily basis.

Microscopic Pollutants Have Global Reach, Impact

from an article by Andrew Bridges

Health problems caused by low level chronic exposure to heavy metals may take years to appear in you. These heavy metals have been linked to conditions ranging from cardiovascular disease, high blood pressure, and many more.

Much of your exposure to heavy metal pollution has been scientifically proven to be linked to cause environmental damage leading to:

- Heart Attacks
- Strokes
- Cancer

There are also many circulatory diseases other than cardiovascular disease that may not cause your death, but can affect your quality of life and maintaining a healthy lifestyle. Some of these are:

- Impotency
- Alzheimer's Disease
- Arthritis

Lead poisoning is a serious and very common type of heavy metal poisoning in our children in America. Symptoms of lead poisoning in children mimic those of Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD). Lead poisoning also causes behavioral and learning problems, nervousness, headaches, and many other related symptoms.

Other Health Issues Linked To Heavy Metal Toxicity (includes children's health issues)

Heavy metal toxicity is frequently the result of long term, low level exposure to pollutants common in our environment: air, water, food, and numerous consumer products. Exposure to toxic heavy metals is associated with many chronic diseases. Recent research has found that even low levels of lead poisoning, mercury, cadmium, aluminum and arsenic can cause a wide variety of health problems.
